Methodologies to Support Underperforming Students and Encourage High Achievers

1. The Department assigns one faculty member as a Counselor for every 14 students.
2. This Counselor familiarizes students with institutional practices, monitors their progress consistently, and provides guidance.
3. The Counselor offers both academic and personal counsel, facilitating connections to appropriate resources as necessary.
4. The Counselor evaluates students' performance to identify underperforming and high-achieving individuals following assessments.

The institution has adopted a counseling system as an initiative to enhance the overall performance of each student. Under this system, comprehensive data for every student is meticulously recorded over the years.

Student Categorization: Students are classified into Slow Learners and Advanced Learners based on academic performance data. Upon identifying underperforming students, personalized interactions are conducted to ascertain their challenges, followed by the implementation of appropriate initiatives aimed at their improvement.

Actions taken to enhance the performance of underperforming students include:

1. Faculty councils provide guidance to underperforming students to improve academic outcomes.
